

STOCKHOLM . HELSINKI . LAPLAND

1. Stockholm, Sweden

Begin your travels in the "town between the bridges." The Gamla Stan, Stockholm's Old Town, is abuzz in winter when the cobblestones are blanketed in snow and locals savor creamy Semla buns for Mardi Gras. Head outdoors for some Nordic skiing or a bus-ride away for downhill thrills. Then, end your day relaxing with a long soak in a hot sauna.

2. Helsinki, Finland

Helsinki may be the only capital on the planet where you have to yield to cross-country skiers -- in the middle of town! In fact, when the temperatures drop the city comes alive with skating and sledding, ice fishing and hiking across the frozen bay. Just make sure to bundle up and grab a thermos of rich, hot chocolate.

3. Lapland, Finland

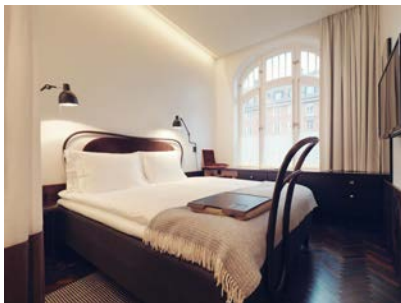

Just as magical as the Aurora Borealis is the beauty of a Scandinavian winter. Track the steps of reindeer and moose, brown bears and musk oxen as you swish across the landscape on your own dog sled. Snowmobile over frozen lakes and take snowshoe treks through vast stretches of wilderness before exploring the villages of the Sami people, one of the oldest cultures on Earth.
